Jewish Home Family

We've Blazed Quite a Trail

Carol Silver Elliott, President & CEO, Jewish Home Family

Dear friends,

What an amazing accomplishment it is for an organization to reach its 110th birthday! The founders of the Hebrew Orphans Home of Hudson County could never have imagined that their efforts to help children in need would evolve into a sophisticated continuum of services for older adults. Today, our two campuses meet the needs of individuals in so many ways, from short term rehab to hospice care.

Over the course of our history, we've blazed quite a trail. From caring for orphans, we began to care for women in need and then older adults. We offered medical care in addition to what was called "custodial care" and were recognized as the largest specialty hospital in the State of New Jersey in the 1950's. Moving to Bergen County, first with a small nursing home in River Vale in the 1970's, the major transition took place in 2001, with the opening of the Jewish Home at Rockleigh and, in 2007, Jewish Home Assisted Living in River Vale.

Since then, we have continued to grow, with the latest major expansion taking place in 2022 with the opening of the Berkowitz Center for Rehabilitation Excellence and Taub Family Residences. Our inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation services have not only been very well utilized since their opening but have made a tremendous difference in the lives, and health, of many.

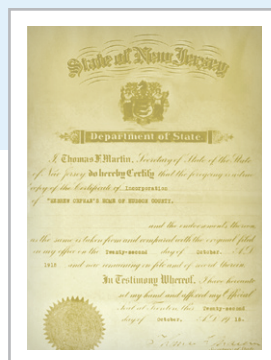

Today we are poised on the edge of more meaningful change. We are focused on transforming the long-term care experience and we are doing that through re-imagining, and reinvention, of our long-term care units. Incorporating the principles of the Green House Project, we are focused on providing "real home" and "meaningful life" for our elders. We do this by reconfiguring into households that have smaller numbers of elders and that are staffed by consistent, multi-skilled workers. This transition was completed in mid-2023 in Memory Lane at Jewish Home Assisted Living and the difference is palpable. Elders are given far greater opportunities to make their own choices, to control their own lives, and we can see the change in engagement and interaction. The Seiden unit renovation at the Jewish Home at Rockleigh was completed recently, the staff have been trained and prepared for their new roles and we are excited for what lies ahead.

While the founders of the Hebrew Orphans Home would not recognize this organization that they had the foresight to establish, there is no question that they would recognize the values that endure – commitment to community, care for those in need and a determination to improve the lives of others.

There will be many 110th birthday events ahead and we hope to see you, and to celebrate with you!

Be well,

Am Yisrael Chai,

CELEBRATING

110 Years
VISION DEDICATION

OF JEWISH HOME FAMILY!

During our 110th year, in 2025, let's take a journey together, looking back at our roots to see just how far we have come.

In 1915, the Hudson County Jewish community responded to the plight of orphaned Jewish immigrant children by founding the Hebrew Orphans Home of Hudson County in Jersey City, New Jersey. Over the years, the organization grew and changed, responding to the community's changing needs; beginning with orphans and transitioning to elder care, offering long-term care and assisted living as well as inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation.

Throughout our history, the Jewish Home Family has been a beacon of light for our community. First, responding to the needs of our children, and as needs have changed in our community, retooling our mission and services to meet the needs of our elders and the community at large. With community support, and our organization's ongoing commitment to the community, the Jewish Home Family continues to grow and serve.

SPOTLIGHT

INGE and PAUL WOLFF

A Story of Commitment

Paul Wolff has long been recognized as one of the founders of the Jewish Home at Rockleigh. Along with other community-minded individuals, Paul was instrumental in the development of the nursing home that exists to this day. The story of what led Paul, and his wife, Inge to this involvement is one that has its roots in Germany on the cusp of World War II.

Born in Munich, Paul left Germany alone at the age of 18. Recognizing the danger ahead, his parents secured passage on a ship, and he came to the United States in 1938. Inge, who was born on the other side of Germany, in Giessen, fled the country with her family with the help of visas secured through bribery, a not uncommon, but very risky, practice.

Paul and Inge met at the YMHA in Washington Heights, New York. They were members of a youth group made up exclusively of German Jews. After serving in the U.S. Army, Paul married Inge when World War II ended. They initially lived with Inge's parents in Washington Heights before moving into an apartment together in the same neighborhood. Eventually, they relocated to Bergenfield, New Jersey, to raise their family. Elly and Linda, their daughters, recall their parents' deep connection with the Jewish community, "The connection with the synagogue and JCC was pivotal; it's how my parents became deeply involved with the Jewish community here in Bergen County."

Inge and Paul's connection with the Jewish Home really began when both Paul and Inge's parents were residents of the Jewish Home.

Paul became a successful businessman, first with his own business, making belts and later, handbags. He sold his business in the 1960's and then became an executive with Coach. Leaving Coach in 1972, Paul began selling advertising specialties. Inge was an apprentice to a tailor in Germany in her teen years and became a seamstress. This was at a time when school attendance in her community became frightening and unsafe for Jewish children. Inge acquired skills that sparked her lifelong interest in fashion. Elly and Linda recall her making not only her own clothes, as well as her daughters' clothes, but even dresses for their friends. Inge also used her skills to help Paul with his business making belts and handbags. In addition, she worked as a nursery schoolteacher at the JCC, first in Englewood and then in Tenafly, for more than 25 years, a role she loved.

Inge and Paul's connection with the Jewish Home really began when both Paul and Inge's parents were residents of the Jewish Home, in the small River Vale facility that opened in the 1970's. While the care in the nursing home was good, the building itself left much to be desired in those years. The rooms were not private, the building itself was very old. Paul and Inge felt that the Jewish community in Bergen County deserved, and needed, something better.

Working with a group of people that included Russ Berrie, Lenny Rubin, Carl Epstein and many others, Paul was instrumental in helping to identify the Rockleigh site.

That 50-bed facility was replaced by the existing Rockleigh building in 2001 and the River Vale site became home to Jewish Home Assisted Living, which opened in 2007.

Working with a group of people that included Russ Berrie, Lenny Rubin, Carl Epstein and many others, Paul was instrumental in helping to identify the Rockleigh site. It was a multi-year, complex process to gut the building that existed on that location and rebuild it as a nursing home. But that hard work became a labor of love and there was enormous pride when the Jewish Home at Rockleigh opened its doors.

Paul remained active with the Jewish Home. He helped develop the annual Gala and worked closely with both the Foundation Executive Director, and marketing consultant, to help plan and create the event's journal, which continues to be a significant source of revenue to this day. Inge and Paul were Gala honorees in 2011.

After 55 years in their home in Bergenfield, Paul and Inge moved into a senior complex where they lived together until Paul's passing in 2015. Alone, Inge was happy with her apartment and her friends, but, at 99 years of age, her daughters were concerned that she needed more support. In 2021, Inge moved into Jewish Home Assisted Living where she immediately became part of the JHAL community, attending programs and never missing her favorite exercise classes. She was part of a small group of centenarians that live at Assisted Living and would proudly share her age with anyone who asked! Inge passed away in August 2024, just 29 days before her 102nd birthday.

The Wolff family, including Paul and Inge's two daughters, five grandchildren and eight great grandchildren, maintain their commitment to the Jewish Home Family, honoring their parents' legacy and ensuring that their good works continue.

SPOTLIGHT UNSUNG HEROES

People are often surprised when they learn that the Jewish Home Family has more than 500 employees. Even folks who have been subacute patients, or live on one of our campuses, don't realize that it takes so many people, in so many varied roles, to provide the services that we do. Clinical staff, non-clinical staff, everyone plays a vital role in ensuring that we are offering the highest quality care possible.

Thanks to the generosity and thoughtfulness of some of our donors, we now have a new recognition program, focused specifically on "unsung heroes."

The Thelma and Sol Lieber Unsung Hero Award will begin in 2025. The award is named in honor of two long-time Jewish Home Assisted Living residents, Thelma and Sol Lieber. Every department in the organization will have the opportunity to nominate an unsung hero. These nominees will represent one or more of the Jewish Home's five key values: Caring; Kindness; Honesty; Hard Work; Family. Thelma and Sol were living examples of these values.

Thelma had a passion for family, both her own children and extended family. Her caring extended to her children's friends and her own friends, always demonstrating her warm and sincere heart. She was diagnosed with late onset MS but never let that stop her from being engaged and active, including during her 10 years at JHAL and staff still talk about how kind and thoughtful she was. Sol was a hard-working man who built a career in textile sales. He valued honesty and always believed in being truthful with his customers and with his family.

Nominations will open on March 1st and close on April 1st, annually. Each individual selected will be recognized at the Jewish Home's annual Employee Service awards program in May. The expectation is that there will be close to 20 individuals selected for this award each year. After the presentation of the initial awards, the nominations will be reviewed again, and three individuals will be selected as the top honorees. Each of the honorees, and their spouse or guest, will be invited to the Jewish Home Gala in the fall, where they will be recognized and will receive a monetary award of $500.

Sol and Thelma Lieber

The Jewish Home Family is delighted to have this opportunity to celebrate our staff and to draw attention to those special individuals who, quietly and often in the background, make a difference in the lives of our elders every day.
